

CHILDREN IN NEED OF A CASA

There are 341 Children on Our Waiting List

Two little girls, ages 4 and 6, came into foster care recently due to mom and dad's substance abuse issues. Officials had been surveilling the home for a month due to reported sales of methamphetamines out of the home. Upon entering the home they found a chaotic scene with many adults using methamphetamine. The little girls were in a back room by themselves and, when removed, were wearing dirty clothing and appeared to be very hungry, having not eaten in several days. Dad was jailed and mom fled the scene. These two little girls could not take anything with them from the home due to the presence of the toxic drug. They left the home with no blankets and no stuffed animals for comfort. Mom was soon found and offered treatment but refused to enter a residential program; she is currently living on the street. No family has stepped forward to take these little girls into a safe and loving home and they were placed into foster care with the hopes that family will come forward. These sisters need someone to advocate for them as they move through the difficulties to come.

HAPPY ENDINGS

A CASA truly made a difference in the life of a CASA child! At one month of age, a little boy came into the system and lived in foster care for the next two and a half years. His mother was unable to meet his needs and was deep in her methamphetamine addiction. He never knew his father. The day he came into care, he was placed with a foster family who wanted to adopt him from the first time they met him - they loved him instantly. A CASA was appointed immediately to advocate for his best interest. Mom had two older children who had been removed from her care due to neglect and the CASA requested an early hearing to move more quickly to a permanent home for this little boy. The Judge granted a quick hearing to address the need for a loving and stable home for this little boy. At that hearing, the mom was unwilling to accept her part in the neglect of her son. The CASA spoke to the little boy's progress with his foster parents, and through his speech and physical therapies. At subsequent hearings, the CASA continued to advocate for adoption and consistent placement. Many times the foster parents were near to giving up, feeling the system was too difficult and that their hearts would break. The CASA kept the focus on the needs of this little boy and championed his right to a safe and loving forever family. The decision was made by mom to sign over her rights to the child and the family moved toward adoption. The little boy is now permanently and legally a part of the only family he has ever known. The CASA is still a part of his life and will be as he grows into his potential as a young man in the safety and security of his loving family.
